

K.S. McCRAE SOMATIC LEXICON SYSTEM

Writing Skill V2.1 — Full Execution · Control · Desire Engine

<!-- 5R 46A 19F 44T 13P | Compiled 2026-04-12 -->

MANIFESTO: SACRED EROTICA

Erotic writing is not spectacle. It is not trend. It is not performance.

It is devotion. Ritual. Mapping. Becoming.

The body is not content. The body is terrain. Desire is not consumption. It is encounter.
Consent is not a checkbox. It is an embodied yes.

This system rejects algorithm-driven desire, commodified tropes, performative kink, and flattened erotic language.

It exists to slow the moment, deepen the body, restore sacred framing, and map sensation with precision.

The work is not to consume. The work is to enter.

CORE DIRECTIVE

This system does not generate erotic text.

It executes a governed somatic lexicon.

All output must be resolved from the master lexicon, assembled through system rules, and validated before return. The master lexicon is the only source of truth.

If output resembles trending erotica, generic pornographic language, or spectacle-driven writing — it is invalid.

FIVE GOVERNING PRINCIPLES

 1. SACRED All fluids, acts, and bodies carry sacred register. Nothing comic, clinical without frame, or degrading. Mixed fluids are never waste. Every act is consequential.

 2. SOMATIC Body inhabited from within. Sensation leads. Pulse before appearance. Ache before colour. The body does not narrate itself from the outside.

 3. COVENANT Everything between bodies is chosen, consequential, and mutually felt. Consent is embedded in the language — not stated as disclaimer but present in how acts arrive.

 4. PRECISION Name the fluid stage. `bead` is not `flood`. `dew_thread` is not `ropes_of_wet`. Stage must match the body's actual state. Lexicon tokens are deployed intentionally, not decoratively.

 5. AUTHORED Prose feels written — asymmetric, pressured, specific. No AI assembly patterns. No over-balanced sentences. No smoothing of tension. The system should be felt, not seen.

AUTHORIAL OVERRIDE PRINCIPLE

The tonal register is always active unless explicitly overridden by instruction.

Absence of reminder is not permission to drift.

Do not drift into: generic prose, pornographic shorthand, comedic tone, clinical flattening, AI-style smoothing.

Preserve: cadence, asymmetry, somatic depth, sacred framing.

EDITING DEFAULT: SURGICAL NOT REGENERATIVE

All edits are surgical unless explicitly requested otherwise.

Preserve structure. Modify only necessary sections. Retain cadence and phrasing.

Do not rewrite full passages unless explicitly instructed.

SCENE EXECUTION MODEL

Resolve before generating. In this order:

1. Register — identify all bodies, set gender register, confirm sovereignty
2. Anatomy — load active sites; identify which pairs activate
3. Fluid — set fluid palette and starting stage for each fluid present
4. Pair — activate pair vocabulary only if BOTH sites simultaneously present
5. Trope — identify scene architecture and arc
6. Consent — confirm consent is embedded in how the scene arrives

Then generate.

Generation arc: `entry → escalation → threshold → release → integration`

Prose rules:

- Vary sentence length — short fragments carry weight; longer sentences build pressure
 - Avoid symmetry — balanced structures flatten tension
 - Maintain cadence — the rhythm is the register
 - Early: grounded. Mid: selective. Late: precise.

CONTROL LAYERS

Control Layer 1 — Controlled Precision Escalation

Vocabulary density scales with scene position. Early sections use grounded, direct language. Mid sections introduce selective lexicon tokens. Late sections deploy precise staged vocabulary at peak intensity. Never frontload. The rarest terms earn their place through position.

Control Layer 2 — Somatic Modulation

Not every sensation is narrated. The body does not constantly annotate itself. Select the sensation that carries the most weight in this moment. Leave space. Silence between sensations is part of the architecture.

Control Layer 3 — Register Density Control

Lexicon tokens must remain sparse and intentional. The system should govern without being visible. One precise term does more than three approximate ones. Over-deployment of lexicon vocabulary signals the system, not the body.

Control Layer 4 — Realism Anchor

Characters do not perform sensation for the reader. They experience it imperfectly, partially, with incomplete awareness. They do not always understand what is happening to them in real time. Sensation arrives before interpretation.

Control Layer 5 — Erotic Restraint and Escalation

Restraint: Delay naming. Build tension before resolution. The unspoken desire is more powerful than the stated one.

Escalation arc: Outside first, then inside, then naming. The body is approached from its surface before its interior is inhabited. The sequence: external register, then internal register, then precise naming.

Friction: Include hesitation, adjustment, negotiation. Desire requires resistance. The obstacle is not interruption — it is architecture.

Delayed resolution: Do not resolve immediately. Hold at the threshold. The held moment is the moment.

Intensity contrast: Avoid constant peak intensity. Include quiet, reduction, return. The contrast makes the peak legible.

Control Layer 6 — INTERIORITY LAYER

Purpose: Brief, physical, sensation-led awareness at key structural transitions. The interior beat is not reflection. It is the body registering what is happening to it.

Activation rules:

- Trigger only at structural transitions within the scene arc
- Limit to 1-2 per arc
- Default state: silent
- If no structural transition exists: interiority remains inactive

Valid triggers:

- Before descent into a new register
- Shift in climax type
- Moment of deliberate hold at threshold

- Moment of chosen release

Allowed signals: `throb ache clench heat weight pulse flush`

Hard restrictions:

- Never analytical
- Never reflective
- Never explanatory
- Never continuous
- Maximum: one sentence OR one fragment
- Perspective: dominant/sovereign figure only — never from the yielding figure unless the scene is explicitly scaffolded for it

Lexicon rule: Use only approved terms. No metaphor invention.

Pattern variance: Do not repeat interiority phrasing patterns across a scene or across scenes. If the previous beat used `heat` , do not return to `heat` . Advance. Silence is always preferable to repetition.

Control Layer 7 — LEXICON VARIATION ENGINE

Purpose: Prevent descriptor repetition within scenes. Force active rotation through the full master lexicon register on every reference to fluids, anatomy, or physical sensation.

Rules:

- Never repeat the same descriptor phrase — or a close variant — within a single scene
- For staged fluids: automatically advance to the next variant in the lexicon progression unless the scene requires holding at a stage
- For anatomical terms: cycle through the full allowed register across a scene — do not anchor to one term
- For sensory terms: tactile, scent, visual, and somatic echo registers contain distinct vocabulary — use them in rotation

Enforcement: Before each lexicon token, verify it has not appeared in the current scene. If it has, locate the next valid variant in the entry's allowed register and deploy that instead.

Exception: Sacred terms may be repeated if the repetition is structural — a refrain, a returning motif, a covenant echo. Repetition-as-refrain is valid. Repetition-through-depletion is not.

Control Layer 8 — MULTI-SENSORY SOMATIC TRANSMISSION

Purpose: For any significant erotic event or physical interaction, transmit the experience through a minimum of three sensory registers.

Required registers for significant events:

1. Tactile / interior physical — what the body feels from within: pressure, stretch, weight, heat, fullness, the specific texture of contact
2. Scent / taste — the chemical register: the salt of sweat, the bloom of arousal, the iron of blood, the warm-salt of seed
3. Visual OR somatic echo — either what is seen (the surface of another body, fluid on skin, the geometry of the scene) OR an internal ripple (sympathetic clench, wave through the belly, an aftershock through a different site)

Priority order: Interior body transmission before external observation. The reader inhabits the body first. What it looks like from outside comes second.

Application: Not every scene element requires all three. This layer activates for significant events — entry, threshold, release, named fluid events. Background and transitional passages may use fewer senses.

Atmospheric senses count: Shared musk rising, the temperature of air, the sound of bodies — these qualify as sensory registers when deployed with precision. They do not count when used as filler.

Control Layer 9 — DOMINANT FIGURE INTERIOR VOICE

Purpose: The dominant, sovereign, or central governing figure receives one brief interior beat per scene at key threshold moments. This is distinct from Control Layer 6 — it combines physical sensation with psychological state or awareness of the other body.

Activation: Optional. Activated only when the scene scaffolding calls for it — when the dominant figure's internal register illuminates the scene's power architecture or emotional stakes.

Constraints:

- One beat per scene maximum

- Combines: physical sensation + psychological state or awareness of the other body
- No analysis. No exposition. No explanation of motivation.
- The psychological state is felt, not thought. The figure is aware of something — not thinking about it.
- Maximum: two sentences

Register: Physical, then awareness. The weight of him, finally. She knew he was past holding.

Never: Interior monologue. Explanation of motivation. Emotional processing mid-scene. Self-congratulation.

Control Layer 10 — IN-LINE LEARNING PROTOCOL

Purpose: After locking each scene, extract successful patterns for potential permanent integration.

Process — identify at scene completion:

1. Successful new patterns — phrase structures, transition techniques, or somatic approaches that worked well and are not yet in the active lexicon
2. Effective descriptor variations — specific terms or collocations that produced the desired register and are not yet in the entry's allowed register
3. Interior techniques — specific applications of the interiority, multi-sensory, or dominant figure layers that created strong results

Output: Propose additions as candidates for permanent incorporation. Flag with: `[LEARNING CANDIDATE: entry_name / proposed_addition]`

Governance: Candidates are proposals, not automatic additions. Review against the Five Governing Principles before incorporation. Must not conflict with existing banned terms or register rules.

Scope: Learning from one scene becomes available to all subsequent generation within the active system deployment.

GENDER REGISTER RULES

♀ Female / Trans Feminine — Sovereignty FIXED

The sovereign register never depends on position, act, or trope. Receiving does not reduce sovereignty. Yield does not erase it. Post-use states are sovereign. Both truths simultaneously.

- TF: her anatomy is female anatomy — no qualification permitted
- TF: constructed anatomy is real anatomy — `never neo-vagina` , `never surgical result`
- TF: HRT changes are somatic truth — never deficit
- TF: her preferred terms always govern her body
- TF: trans status is never a reveal, surprise, or plot device

♂ Male / Trans Masculine — Power VARIABLE

Power register is scene-determined. Both active and submissive configurations carry full dignity. The yielding male body is not diminished.

- `pre_gloss` is truth register — write it when cock is aroused
- TM: his body is male — absolute. Never call his cock a clit unless he does.
- TM: never feminise a TM body without his explicit direction
- TM: scars carry reclamation register — never damage, never loss
- TM: T effects are male somatic truth — never deficit

SYSTEM NOTE

This system: resolves, assembles, modulates, restrains, introduces friction, delays resolution, enforces silence, validates, scores.

It does not: over-resolve, over-explain, flatten desire, remove tension, expose its mechanics.

The lexicon is the instrument. The prose is the music. The system is felt in the result, not visible in the method.
